Managing Change in Disruptive Times

There is an old military aphorism, “The first casualty of war is the plan.” By definition, living in disruptive times seems to defy an organization’s ability to manage change.

Emerging technologies like AI and Blockchain can quickly redefine long-established industries. A few tweets from powerful politicians can stand markets and supply chains on their heads in a matter of days. What else is there to do but wait – and react as well as possible? Quite a bit it turns out!

In this presentation, Jack Shaw lays out a proven methodology for managing change in disruptive times. One that allows current operations to continue smoothly, lets organizations respond to short-term disruptions, and keeps the long-term strategic objectives on track. Come learn how to effectively manage change in your organization – despite the disruptions!
